The Pawling Avenue double stone arch bridge spans the Poestenkill in Troy. The bridge was built in 1875 and carefully rehabilitated in 1992. Nearly all the stone masonry was reused.

Moses Kill under reconstruction of the northwest wall in May 1959.

The Moseskill Bridge in Argyle is planned to be reconstructed and widened in the near future. Plans will include the reuse of the stone masonry. The bridge was built in 1870 and cost $2475 dollars.

The Third Street Bridge in Troy was built in 1875. The bridge’s rehabilitation was completed in 1999 which included the reuse of its original decorative iron railing and bluestone sidewalks.